This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.

+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.

+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.

+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. Argument.

The downfall of Troy and the overthrow of Priam's ancient realm, now drew nearer and nearer. By the advice of the crafty Ulysses, a colossal horse was constructed of wood, within which several of the most courageous heroes concealed themselves, while the Greek army went on board their ships, feigning to have left the coast of Troy forever. The Trojans looked with much astonishment at the wooden horse, but were told by Sinon, a Greek fugitive, that the Greeks had built it with a view to propitiate Minerva, because they had taken her statue from the city. Laocoon, who had heard that his fellow citizens were about to transport the dangerous gift to the city, hastened to the gates, and conjured them to give up the undertaking. At the close of his speech, he struck against the side of the horse, from which resounded a feeble clash of arms. Laocoon then went with his sons to the temple of Neptune, but while there preparing the offerings, two enormous serpents, which came from the Isle of Tenedos, suddenly attacked him, coiled their immense bodies around his sons; Laocoon rushing upon the monsters to save his children became entangled himself and all died a doubly-painful death.

The death of Laocoon, was considered by the Trojans a punishment by the gods, for violating that present which the Greek had left. The infatuated people hastened with triumphant exultation, to convey the colossal horse to the Palladium. Rejoicing at their deliverance from the dangerous enemy, the hapless inhabitants now abandoned themselves freely to wine, dance and joy, until a late hour of the night. At last, while they were buried in sleep and intoxication, the Greek fleet returned. Sinon, the fugitive traitor, put a ladder to the wooden horse and opened a secret door, and thus a number of Greek heroes were already in the city walls. They easily overpowerd the drunken guard, and admitted the Greek army within the walls of Troy, to search of prey and murder. Priam was slain, Hecuba his queen, his daughters and Andromache, Hector's noble spouse, were led away captives. Cassandra, the sister of Hector and who alone in her prophetic visions had divined the treacherous attempt of the Greeks, was buried in the ruins of the city.

No. 1.

(Enter Priam, Hecuba, Helenus, Polyxene and princes, the children of Priam. Aeneas at the head of the Trojan soldiers, Ascagne leading the children, followed by the priests of Neptune and Jupiter and the people. Priam and Hecuba seat themselves on their throne. The various groupes pass them, and deposit their offerings of flowers, fruit, etc., on the altar.)

March and Hymn.

Chorus: God, thou protector of Troy, the eternal,
Grant acceptance of our sacrifice,
And from the happy and true hearted people,
Joyful hymns accept in praise.
To you, our help in need, we bring our off'rings,
To you, our help and refuge!
God of Olympus! God of seas!
Great ruler of the universe!
Oh accept our gifts.

No. 2.

Danses and popular games. During the combat of the wrestlers, Andromache enters with Astyanax. The child carries a basquet of flowers, which he places at the foot of the altar, after which Andromache leads him before Priam's throne. The king rises from his throne, tenderly embraces his son and blesses him. Hecuba also blesses him. A painful feeling seems to settle over the assemblage. Andromache weeps aloud, and taking the child by the hand leads him away, midst the sorrowing murmur of the people.)

Chorus: Andromache and her son!
Oh fated hour! There the cries of mirthful and jubilant people,
And here but gloomy forebodings, profoundest mourning!
See her deep, silent grief.
Wives and mothers, weep at the affecting sight.

(Cassandra steps in front.)

Cassandra: Alas! Weep not, widow of Hector!
Misfortunes, greater far, shall press the bitter tear from thine eyes.

(Cassandra leaves the scene.)

No. 3.

(Aeneas enters, addressing the king.)

Aeneas: Behold, great king, on yonder plain
Thy people in great excitement
Fly, as if panic stricken.
Nothing can arrest them.
Some mysterious terror has seized upon them;
Laocoon, mistrusting, and denouncing as treacherous
Yonder work of the Greeks,
Bends his bow, and quivering
Sends his arrow against th[illegible]

He exhorts the people, the work to destroy
With fire and flame.
Just then rise from the waters, swelled with rage
Two monstrous serpents.
Advancing over the shining sand,
They rush at the priest of Apollo,
And coil their terrible bodies around him;
Fiery vapors issue from their nostrils,
Their mighty fangs they pierce in the heart of their victim!
They devour him before our eyes!

No. 4.

Octett and Chorus.

(Priam, Panthee, Chorebe, Helenus, Hecuba, Polyxenus and people.)

Heaven's wrath has descended,
Horror, by fate decreed,
Vengeance divine, deathdealing terror
Descends in our midst unawares.
Punishment so severe, fills all with fear and trembling,
Ah, at this sight the blood chills within my veins.
Laocoon! a high priest,
The chosen mark of wrath divine!
By the serpents devoured! oh horror!

No. 5.

Recitative.

Aeneas: May Minerva, the divine, protect us.
We implore her aid in this new danger.
'Tis but too true, the sacrifice just brought,
Pallas will yet revenge.

Priam: To appease her anger,
My orders obey, without delay.

Aeneas: On mighty rolers raised,
Stands the colossal horse.
Let the people take hold, and in triumph
Conduct it to the Palladium.
In pomp it enter Troy.
Oh gift miraculous, with joy we greet thee!
Maiden and soldiers! with flowers strew the way,
Your joyous chant unite with the lyre's sweet sound
And the trumpet ring.

Chorus: Then for the feast prepare, form the triumphal march!
All fall in line!
With flowers strew the way to the gates of the city!
Let the trumpet and lyre swell the volume of song!
(Cassandra enters with hair flowing, and in great excitement.)

Cassandra: Misfortune! Oh woe!

Chorus: Minerva! Pardon Troy!

No. 6.

(While the people are departing, Cassandra has drawn aside; when finding herself alone, she steps forward.)

Air.

Cassandra: No! heaven may forbid, for me this feast to witness,
Vain is the hope here to warn!
Destiny must he fulfilled! This people is condemned.
The Gods have resolved their ruin.
Frightful yawns the abyss!
Oh what cruel memories!
Glories of our beloved land, doomed to ignoble fate!
Glorious visions of future greatness, how alluring!
Oh Chorebe! oh Priam!
Vain are your efforts of courage! —
My eyes grow dim with tears at your sad fate.

No. 7.

Finale.

March of Trojans.

Chorus: Beloved by Gods, thou daughter of Olymp,
In shining armor, helmet crowned,
Goddess of wisdom and war, heaven's fairest daughter!
Shield us from ill and be propitious,
Let Ilion withstand her foe!

Cassandra: Ha! the fatal procession appears before the walls,
The enemy comes! oh treacherous plot to invest the city!
The foolish people, here assembled for pleasure,
In their mad joy, neglect the orders of the king.

Chorus: Oh hear our voices, virgin divine!
With softest accent of Dindymion,
Mingle merrily our melodies,
Blending gaily with the Trojan lyre.
The Phrygian trumpets blast rings through the air!

(Cassandra standing alone in front of the scene.)

Cassandra: The chorus swells in volume.
The colossal device of the foe now advances.
There it is!

Chorus: Strew with roses the way, fragrant wreaths deck your dwellings.
In whirling dance enjoy, happy children, fortune's hour;
Like snowflakes sprinkle fragrant flowers,
Deck gaily Pallas's temple.
Mirth and joy reign supreme!

(The song of the people suddenly ceases, they look at each other in amazement.)

Cassandra: Mighty Jove! — they are halting,
All is stir and excitement!
Oh God! — if . . .

(Some of the populace:)

Chorus: What is this? What has happened to alarm the people?

(Some of the women:)

What mysterious noise there within the collossus?

(The sun breaks from behind the clouds.)

What happy omen! Renew the song!
Proud Pergamos unveiled,
Flaming in wonted splendor,
Triumph beams from its height!

(Cassandra, when she sees the procession moving away.)

Cassandra: Ah! hold on! beware!
Aye, with fire and hatchet attack the flanks of this monstrous horse!
Laocoon was right! It hides the murderous foe.
My voice refuses! —
Is there no hope, oh cruel ruler of Olymp? —
Thus to destroy thy people! Oh inexorable fate! —
Blindly rushes to destruction a people, doomed by the Gods!
They enter! — all is over!
Destiny is fulfilled!
Hector's sister, go and die,
Die under the ruins of Troy!

End.
